GREEN, SIZES 4 TO 13

One colour, ten sizes. Stock the run and refill.

On at six, off at nine. The Pro Ranger is built for the part of the day that happens outside, in the yard, down the lane and back through the gate. A moulded upper and sole with no seams for water to find, a PU-neoprene lining for the cold, and safety protection underfoot for the jobs where a plain wellie will not do.

It sits between a plain PVC wellie and a full safety boot. For the parlour, the feed passage and the yard, where the floor is wet and the risk is real, it is the one to hand over the counter.

THE WAGYU MAN.

Neal Reid left Northern Ireland at 18 and stayed away for 25 years. When his father died he came home, built a house on the family farm, and bought his first 6 Wagyu. 10 years on he is a fifth-generation farmer with 52 head, every one of them with a name. Episode two of Rooted sits down with him in Walter's Wood.

52

WAGYU. ALL NAMED.

5TH

GENERATION ON THE FARM

YEARS. THE OLDEST TREES ON THE LANE

"You'd make more money down the field burning five pound notes than on a couple of dozen commercial beef cattle. If you want cattle, you need a niche."

THE BUILDER'S ADVICE, AS NEAL REMEMBERS IT

HOW DID A WAGYU HERD END UP HERE?

"When we were building the house, the man who built it was a farmer as well. I told him I was thinking of getting some bullocks because I like cattle and enjoy having them around. He looked at me and said, to make money? He told me to find something other people weren't doing.

My wife had bought me a full-blood Wagyu steak for my 40th. We did a blind taste test against the most expensive steak Waitrose sold, a 42-day aged Angus. 2 completely different meats. The Wagyu was exceptional. So we bought three full-blood and three half-bred and started from there. We're at 52 now, and 52 is where I want to stay. I know every animal. I don't want to reach the stage where they're just a number."

THEY ALL HAVE NAMES?

"The second calf born on the farm arrived in January while a friend called Damien was staying. My daughter was about nine and named the calf after him, so that year was D. We've worked through the alphabet since. This year is L. The last calf was Layla, after Liam, Leo and Luke. She's a fortnight old today."

WHAT DOES A TYPICAL DAY LOOK LIKE?

"Up reasonably early and feed the cattle. We strip-graze, which is unusual for beef. Fresh grass morning and evening, and barley meal for the ten or a dozen bullocks being fattened on barley grown here. Farming in the morning, farming in the evening, and in between what you might call a real job. Then there are weeks when it's all day. We've just made hay, small bales. Most people don't bother because it's easier to wrap haylage. We do that too. But given the choice, the cows pick hay every time."

HAS COMING BACK CHANGED HOW YOU SEE FARMING?

"You're far more aware of the seasons. One day at a time, but you go from snow on the ground to blazing sunshine, and that's grounding. And a realisation of how hard my father worked. You're not only a farmer. You're a mechanic and a weather forecaster. You also learn you're only looking after the place. The ground was here long before me and it'll be here long after. My brother and I want to leave it in better shape than we found it."

THE BIGGEST MISCONCEPTION?

"Most people are completely divorced from food production. They expect straight carrots and perfect apples, and that only happens if you farm intensively. There's a rose-tinted picture of a farmer leaning on a gate. The reality is very hard work. There's no joy in getting up in the dark and going out into horizontal sleet. But there is tremendous satisfaction. If farmers were paid by the hour it would be pennies. Seven days a week, every week of the year. I can remember Daddy being physically sick and still carrying on. The work has to be done."

WHY DOES IT MATTER TO THE COMMUNITY?

"Here a farm might be in the family for generations. The fields have names. The history is passed down by word of mouth. Lose that and a place becomes sterile. So we keep the farm open. People come and see the cattle and understand what goes into a steak. A retired butcher got in touch to say it was the best cut of meat he'd had in his life. He's had a few steaks in his day."

WHAT DO YOU PUT THAT DOWN TO?

"Care. Stress is bad for meat. Our cattle are calm. Walk into the field and they'll come over looking for a scratch. And time. There's no point competing with a man finishing cattle at 18 months. Like whisky, you can't rush it."

THE HARDEST PART OF THE JOB?

"Without a doubt, loading an animal onto the trailer for the abattoir. I've known them since the day they were born. But I eat meat, and if I eat meat I'd rather know where it came from and how it was looked after. They've had a good life here, fed on what grows on this farm. Some say there's no such thing as ethical meat. I'd say if you do eat meat, ours is as good as you'll get."

AND THE BEST PART?

"Watching trees you planted grow. Four trees on the lane are about 250 years old. Somebody planted them. If nobody plants now, the landscape will be a lot bleaker. And the calves. At a month or two old they gather in the evening and race flat out across the field, turn, and race back with their tails up. That never gets old."

WHAT SHOULD PEOPLE TAKE FROM THIS?

"That there's an awful lot to farming. Farmers don't deserve the bad press. They care for their animals and they care for the land. It's a wonderful life, and it can be a difficult one. But the upside far outweighs the downside."

WALTER'S WOOD

Neal's father was Walter. So was his grandfather, and three Walters before them. After Walter died, Neal's brother Ian planted a wood in his name: drifts of birch, alder, rowan and oak, holly and Scots pine for interest, and paths so you can walk through it. Every native species but yew. Planted as whips a finger thick, it now holds birdsong, hedgehog, badger and fox. Where the interview was filmed, and where the family had lockdown picnics.

TEAM XTREME WON THE LAGAN.

Eighteen of us headed into the heart of Belfast for the Dragon Boat Race in support of Air Ambulance Northern Ireland.

Across the morning and afternoon, 16 teams took to the River Lagan for a day of racing, team spirit and fundraising. We arrived as Team Xtreme, ready to give it everything.

The weather had other ideas. It was one of the wettest days you could imagine. Thankfully, we were dressed for the occasion. The full team was kitted out in matching green Xpert Stormgear Bib and Braces and our new Sand Beige Xpert T-shirts.

The message before the boat was simple. This was about putting into practice the Xpert DNA. Working hard. Pulling together. Not giving up.

We flew out of the blocks and recorded the fastest time of the day at around 50 seconds. From there we made it through to the semi-final and won again. Then came the final. It was tight. A proper photo finish. Team Xtreme had won.

FASTEST TIME OF THE DAY

WE RAN THE RUNWAY AT MIDNIGHT.

9 of the team took on the 5K Air Ambulance NI Runway Run at Belfast City Airport, on the tarmac, in the dark, once the last flight was down.

400 runners lined up on the runway and raised over £35,000 between them. It is not often you get to run a live airport, and the novelty carried a fair few of us through the first kilometre.

Air Ambulance NI reaches the fields, farms and back roads a road ambulance cannot get to, and it stays in the air on money raised exactly like this. Every one of our nine finished, medals and all.

WHY AIR AMBULANCE NI.

Air Ambulance NI provides the Helicopter Emergency Medical Service for Northern Ireland, in partnership with the Northern Ireland Ambulance Service. Twelve hours a day, every day of the year, the helicopter carries a pilot, doctor and paramedic to the scene of the most serious emergencies, reaching anywhere in the province in around 25 minutes. The charity raises the £3 million a year that keeps the aircraft flying, with the Department of Health funding the clinical team.
